

Have you ever had difficulty connecting your trailer to your vehicle at the correct height to ensure your trailer is level during your travels?

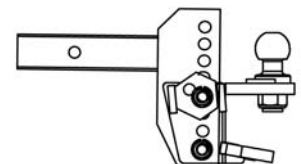

Today vehicles and trailers are being released into the market at a variety of different ground clearance heights so it is becoming more common that people are finding themselves in the situation where they need their sedans to tow a high boat trailer or they have a high 4WD with a low caravan. Therefore the specialists in towing, Hayman Reese, has catered for these situations with different length shanks.

The Hayman Reese Shanks are designed to be used in conjunction with the Hayman Reese Weight Distribution Systems. They come in a variety of lengths which ensures that you can achieve a level setup for your vehicle and trailer. It is very important that the caravan is level when you setup and that the ball weight (the mass towards the front of the trailer carried by the tow ball of the towing vehicle) is about 10% of the total laden trailer weight.

The Hayman Reese Shanks gives you a range of different heights which can be achieved by adjusting the weight distribution head up or down the shank. The shanks can also be used to meet with trailers at a lower height for example a 4WD meeting with a low caravan or turn them around and use them to achieve more height which is common for a sedan and off-road trailer setup.

Therefore this adjustability of the Hayman Reese Shank means that when you purchase a new car or trailer then it is likely you may be able to adjust your existing Hayman Reese Shank to fit.

These shanks can be bought as a part of a Hayman Reese Weight Distribution Hitch or individually starting at an RRP of $188.

The only thing that should come between your car and caravan is Hayman Reese.

Hayman Reese Shanks are part of an extensive range of Hayman Reese products and are available from Hayman Reese Distributors nationally. To find your nearest dealer visit www.haymanreese.com.au
